House, Senate Paper and Packaging Caucus Supports Industry

AF&PA supports the Paper and Packaging Caucus's purpose to inform members of Congress about the value of the paper and packaging industry in their states and districts. This bipartisan, bicameral caucus highlights the importance and economic significance of the paper and packaging industry and focuses on the policy solutions needed to sustain and promote this important sector.

BACKGROUND AND ACTIVITY

Originating in the House in 2013 with 50 members, the caucus expanded membership to include the Senate in 2015. In the 118th Congress, the Caucus is led by Senators Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) and John Boozman (R-AR) in the Senate and Congressmen Dan Newhouse (R-WA-4) and Lou Correa (D-CA-46) in the House of Representatives. Members host a Congressional reception, annual educational events and promote the forest products industry during National Forest Products Week, which takes place during the third week of October.

Join the Paper and Packaging Caucus to represent forest product industry employees in your state or district and the millions of people who depend on the products our industry creates for everyday life.
